Prevention

Phoenix House prevention programs provide schools and community-based entities with cutting-edge, evidence-based curricula for students, parents, and other adults. Our school-based programs for 4th-12th grades teach young people positive physical, intellectual, emotional, and social actions.

Prevention programs foster academic achievement, avoidance of addictive substances, improved social and emotional behaviors, and stronger positive relationships with peers, teachers, and parents.

Evidence-based curricula include: Positive Action, Project Towards No Drugs, Strengthening Families, and AllStars.

Phoenix House specializes in Positive Action Curriculum. This curriculum provides:

- Life skills, lessons, and trainings
- Promotion of self-concept, physical, and intellectual well-being
- Self-management
- Peer relationship development
- Honesty and self-improvement
- Tobacco, alcohol, and drug prevention presentations

Our prevention programs target four specific needs and dynamics of the communities and schools we serve.

- Universal Prevention: Targets all youth regardless of their background or risk factors.
- Selective Prevention: Targets sub-groups of the general population that are determined to be at-risk for substance abuse.
- Indicated Prevention: Offers intervention designed to interrupt the onset or progression of abuse.
- Strengthening Families Prevention: Targets the families of children ages 2-17 who are determined at-risk of substance abuse.
